EFFORT TO BE MADE TO ADVANCE WATER CASE IN HIGH COURT

Both State Health Board and Water Company Will Make Effort to Have Court of Appeals Decide Case Immediately.

An effort is to be made by both the Health Board and the Maysville Water Company to have the case decided Saturday by Judge Newell and immediately appealed to the Court of Appeals, advanced on the high court's docket so that it can be tried before the court adjourns for the summer vacation.

The case, by agreement, has been shaped so that it can go to the high court on the mandatory injunction proposition which, is expected to permit it to be advanced over other cases on the regular docket for an early hearing. Both the Health Board and the water company as well as the City of Maysville, are anxious that some final understanding on the question be reached as early this summer as possible.

In his decision Judge Newell made it clear that he did not intend to tie the hands of the State Board of Health in proceeding against the water company in any other manner it might select and advised that the two get together with the City of Maysville on some practical solution of the problem outside of court just as quickly as possible. The main issue, Judge Newell stated, was not legal wrangling but some action and he advised that the best possible way this could be done was by all interested parties getting their heads together with a determination to do the right thing by the people of Maysville who are compelled to use the water.

It is expected that the case will be filed in the Court of Appeals this week and that some action will be taken by that court before the 15th of June. Until that time, so far as the legal side of the case is concerned, it stands just as it has always been.

SECRETARY MELLON PUTS HIS O. K. ON BEER AS MEDICINE

Action of Congress Will Not Be Awaited But Treasury Secretary Mellon Acts Unhesitatingly.

Washington, May 23.—Advocates of beer for medicinal purposes may cheer up. Just when all seemed lost to them and Representative A. J. Volstead, aided by officials of the Anti-Saloon League, planned to invalidate the decision of former Attorney General Mitchell Palmer permitting the use of malt liquors under a physician's prescription, along comes Secretary of the Treasury A. W. Mellon, who says he believes beer should be dispensed to the sick, no matter what action Congress may take to prevent its distribution.

In fact the Secretary of the Treasury has practically decided on a reversal of the policy announced by his predecessor not to issue any regulations regarding the use of malt liquors until the legislative arm of the government had spoken its will concerning this all important question—important, at least, to those who have grown tired of "home brew." "near beer" and like concoctions.

When Mr. Mellon was informed that Congress in all probability would not act for perhaps six weeks or two months on the measure now under consideration in the House Judiciary Committee outlawing beer as a medicine and preventing its manufacture for any purpose whatsoever, he called into conference his advisers. The conclusion was reached at this meeting that the Treasury Department should not wait for action by Congress, but should take immediate steps to put into actual operation the ruling of Mr. Palmer.

In this action the head of the Treasury Department went over the heads of Prohibition Commissioner J. P. Kramer and other prohibition officials who contended that no regulations for the use of beer should be promulgated by the department until Congress had acted one way or the other and made known its attitude with respect to the use of beer as a medicine.

MR. HOEFFLICH TO MANAGE LOCAL DRY GOODS STORE

Mr. Charles Rosenstien Resigns as Manager and Will Likely Be Succeeded by Former Merchant.

Several weeks ago Mr. Charles Rosenstien, who has managed the Maysville Sult and Dry Goods Company's local store since its organization, resigned as manager effective as soon as the proper successor to him could be employed.

It is understood that a movement is on foot now for the directors to employ Mr. R. L. Hoeflich, former local dry goods merchant, to take charge of the business and the directors are expected to meet within the next few days with Mr. Hoeflich to reach terms and a contract.

Mr. Rosenstien has been quite successful in business in Maysville. He and his splendid family have made many friends who hope they will not leave Maysville.

The announcement that Mr. Hoeflich will likely again engage in business in Maysville is welcome news to the Maysville shoppers for there never has been a more popular dry goods merchant in Maysville and all will be very glad to know that he will again be active in the local business life.

PRESIDENT HONORS WORLD WAR HEROES IN NEW YORK TODAY

Plans on Eastern Trip Are Somewhat Changed and Executive Pays Tribute to 5,000 Heroes.

New York, May 23.—President Harding, today, altered the program of his visit to New York, in order to take part in impressive ceremonies in honor of 5,000 heroes of the World War, whose bodies lay in state on an army pier in Hoboken.

Arrangements for the President's participation were made by wireless by the American Legion, and F. W. Galbraith, national commander of the legion and a speaker at the memorial service, met the party from the yacht Mayflower at the navy pier at 96th street with a fleet of automobiles. The party drove through streets lined with thousands of cheering citizens, and guarded by hundreds of bluejackets and police, to a ferry station, where it embarked for the Hoboken pier. The guns on the destroyer fleet anchored in the Hudson River boomed a welcome to the President, and bells throughout the metropolis tolled in final tribute to the dead soldiers. Flags in the city were at half-staff throughout the day.

WILL GERMANY FULFILL THE BOND?

When the Versailles Treaty was ready for signature the Allies having stripped Germany of immense territories, her shipping, her cables, her foreign investments and her most valuable mining property, and encompassed her economic and industrial enslavement for more than a generation, called her in to sign where they indicated.

In one aspect of the case this was no more than right. Germany can never absolve herself in a thousand years. Seas could not wash away the guilt under which she staggers. At the same time there is a wide difference of opinion on both sides of the Atlantic among men who speak with authority as to the practicability and expediency of the settlement of Paris.

Whoever may be right or wrong it must be admitted that the Germans signed the Treaty under duress, protesting their inability to meet its demands, and openly declaring that it could be supported and executed only with bayonets. It was clearly understood in the allied countries that force must be exercised again and again if its provisions were to be carried out.

Now that the Reparations Commission has fixed the total indemnity to be exacted, a capital sum of 137,000,000,000 gold marks, payable in annual installments at five per cent. interest over a period of forty years, with an export tax added, the Germans have again signed under pressure and with a deeper growl of fury.

The ministry having resigned rather than submit to the demands another, headed by Dr. Wirth as Chancellor, has been formed for the purpose of doing what Dr. Walter Simons declined to do. The action in the Reichstag was in favor of the new government by a vote of 221 to 175.

The German people generally are bitterly resentful. The acceptance of the terms laid down is based on cruel necessity. In order to save the country from further invasion and to prevent the invaluable industrial region of the Ruhr from falling into French hands and being eventually alienated altogether, the present ministry, purely a transitional one, has once more signed on the dotted line. Mr. Wirth made the following statement:

"There is no possibility for us other than acceptance or rejection. The victors have so decided.

"Acceptance means that we declare our readiness to hear in voluntary labor the heavy financial burdens demanded year by year. Refusal would, however, mean surrendering the basis of our entire industrial activities, and, as a consequence, dismemberment of our economic body, already so greatly weakened, and the shackling of our entire industrial life.

"But the effects might be even more terrible for our political existence and our realm.

"For these reasons the government accepts the ultimatum. We know that acceptance, by reason of the place Germany will occupy in the economy of the world, will entail the gravest consequences. The responsibility for this falls on the Allies."

In these circumstances and under such conditions it is no wonder that many in France and England, as well as here, have expressed the conviction that sooner or later Germany will default. As antagonistic interests gradually strain and break the bonds that temporarily hold the Allies together, and as new alignments take the place of the old in Europe, the German nation, nearly seventy million strong, will, upon the first favorable opportunity throw off the yoke of the victors, and, in the unaltered temper of the Europe of our generation, seek revenge.

This is the tragedy of the situation. John Maynard Keynes, whose book on the economic consequences of the peace treaty has had such a tremendous effect, and who represented the British treasury at Paris, says:

"Terror and despair may again force the Germans to give empty assent to what they cannot and will not perform, with added contempt from the world.

"But the truth is that the Germans are a nation bewildered and humiliated beyond description, desperately ready to traverse any avenue out of their troubles, and to perform up to the limit of their capacity for the sake of a quiet life and a little respect."

The whole world, and above all the United States is vitally interested in seeing this matter permanently and justly settled. The value of the German bonds, will depend entirely upon whether the issue is so compromised as to guarantee peace and ultimate liquidation. And it must not be forgotten that Americans are expected to invest heavily in these bonds at once, in order to give France and the other Allies the ready cash without which some of them will be compelled to confess insolvency.—Lexington Leader.

SERVICE EVER.

With characteristic energy, General Wood has set himself to the task of finding out the truth about the Philippines. Immediately upon landing at Manila he, with former governor W. Cameron Forbes, began the taking of testimony. Morning and afternoon sessions were arranged for each day, and all persons desiring to give the commissioners their views on Philippine affairs were invited to speak. "Our instructions," said General Wood in a preliminary statement, "were to come to the islands and make a fully, fair, impartial report upon conditions for President Harding and not necessarily to find any fault with the Filipino people." The report that the general will submit will be the first reliable information on the Philippines, and the ability of the Filipinos to govern themselves, that the country has had in many years. It will be of inestimable value to the President in recommending a policy toward the islands.

WRONG END TO.

Funny old world! A while back people were buying a lot of things they didn't need no matter how high the price; now they won't buy a lot of things they really need no matter how low the price. They didn't save while the saving was easy and now they try to save while the saving is hard.

SAWYER TO GET CABINET POST WITH HARDING

Almost Sure To Be Secretary of Welfare in President's Cabinet Is Physician.

Washington, — Brigadier General C. E. Sawyer, President Harding's personal physician, may become the first secretary of public welfare and a member of the President's cabinet.

As the President's representative, he has collaborated with Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, in framing the bill whereby all the present health and educational agencies of the government are to be consolidated into a single ne department, the head of which will be placed in the cabinet.

Because of the thorough and comprehensive manner in which he has handled this new work, General Sawyer may be the President's choice to conduct it while the Kenyon bill is enacted into law.

The plan of combining the health and educational functions into a single now department was first outlined by President Harding during the 1920 presidential campaign. As finally worked out in the Kenyon bill, it provides for the appointment of a secretary of public welfare and four assistant secretaries, each of the latter to be in charge of a division.

The four divisions are those of education, Public Health, and Social Service and the division of Veterans Service Administration.

Each division is to be divided into three sections. That of education will be divided into the Vocational, Physical and General sections; that of Public Health into the Research, Quarantine and Hospitalization sections; that of Social Service into the Occupational Child Welfare, and Humanization sections; an dthat of Veterans Service Administration into the War Risk Insurance, Vocational Training, and Health Service sections.

Answering the criticism that creation of a new government department would involve increased rather than diminished government expenditures, General Sawyer shows that whereas twelve different bureaus to be combined under the Kenyon bill cost the treasury a total of $701,371,230 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, the estimated cost when co-ordinated under a single head will be $536,635,855 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922.

The twelve bureaus or agencies, together with their respective estimated expenditures for the next fiscal year are:

WRONG IDENTIFICATION CAUSE OF MIXUP.

Worcester, Mass., — With the supposed body of Carl Weldelm Lemberg, former private in the 301st ammunition train, on its way to Worcester, Lemberg has been positively identified as alive in the Norwich state hospital for the insane, while friends here were making plans for holding a military funeral. Red Cross officials and Lemberg's friends were striving to straighten out the tangle and have the soldier's body, now on its way here, properly identified and sent to its proper destination.

COULD BE BARON, BUT SCORNE TITLE.

Detroit, Mich. — A seat in the House of Lords and a fortune estimated at $1,250,000 await Francis B. Courtney, head of the foundry planning department of the Cadillac Motor Car Company when he arrives in England. Courtney, who has booked passage to England by way of Montreal, says he doesn't care a snap for the title of baron and intends to return to the United States just as soon as the estate can be settled.

Death of an uncle whose two sons were killed in the world war made Courtney the heir to the estate and position.

Courtney could assume the title of baron and control the lands of Chislehurst. He said just before leaving, however, that he would never adopt the title.

"I was contented before this great fortune came to me," he said, "and I am coming back to my country for my heart is here."

NATIVES KILL FORESTS.

Mexico City. — Newspapers here have taken up an active campaign to save the vast forests in the states of Puebla and Oaxaca which, according to reports, are said to be suffering at the hands of the natives, who chop down and burn trees indiscriminately. Travelers from these regions tell of finding natives using ebony and mahogany and other precious woods for fuel.

New York Letter

by
Lucy Jeanne Price

New York. — The return to normal days is no wretchedly complete. The acrobats have returned to the streets of the lower East Side. For years, these troupes of tumblers were the special joy of that part of town and however poor the block where they performed, enough copper pennies always came forth to lead them back again. During the war, and for these thirty months after it, these entertainers disappeared. Copper pennies were considered too lightly to attract one into rolling oneself about the pavement. The other day they reappeared, unrolling their small mats on the sidewalk and going through their really lurid acrobatic feats in return for the small bits of change tossed them, and the applause and devoted admiration of the neighborhood.

Gray hair dye! Guaranteed to turn the blackest or blondest locks into a beautiful, soft, blue white! That's the latest demand of a perfectly amazing number of New York women and the beauty shops are applying it by the pint-full. A few years ago there was a sudden increased dislike on the part of women of the time when one began to "turn gray." Also they conceived a prejudice against their natural hair color. A good many of them reddened their tresses, and oh! — they did all sorts of things in the color line. The result was that in a few years, their hair got sort of dead looking and streaked with gray in the roots and turned various shades which had never been planned. Some clever person suggested premature whitening as a remedy and it has been solved up on with acclaim. So the next time you sit in a hotel lounge and watch woman after woman pass by with youthful face and white hair, don't picture all sorts of tragedies working havoc with New York women. No deadly stroke of nature did all that work.

No kingdom of the earth ermines outside the scope of the motion pictures. The air long since became a highway for their empires, and now the floor of the ocean has been added to their stage. In "Wet Gold," a photograph by J. Ernest Williamson, which is being distributed by Goldwyn, almost all of the photography was taken under water. The photographer was lowered in a long tube attached to a barge. At the base of the tube is a fair-sized work chamber, one side of which is made of glass and resembles the head of a searchlight. From the hinge a large frame of lights is let down into the water to illuminate the "stage." In "Wet Gold," Mr. Williamson and his actor-divers walked along the bottom of the sea near the Bahama Islands in search of submarine pirates' treasure. It is quite sufficiently perilous-looking to give a decided thrill to the onlooker, but the searchers, themselves, seem quite at home in their sand and water scenery. It's Jules Verne come true!

One New York florist believes thoroughly in obeying one's own slogans. Enthusiastic florist bills ran pretty high and a good many of his customers seemed to be unusually forgetful this spring. So along with his May bills, printed with the now famous words, "Say it with flowers," across the top, he sent a little bunch of forget-me-nots to each delinquent.

We are a brave people, Handlens only spur us on. Never, one would say offhand, has this city known such a deluge of scandalous and conspicuous divorce trials as went into our courts last month. Matrimony certainly seemed a desperate step as one read the headlines. And now the City Hall tells us that last month's marriage licenses numbered well above the average and almost made a record figure.

The old jokes about the voices of unborn singers will have to be dropped into the discard pretty soon if this sort of thing keeps up. Miss Yvonne d'Arle — and she swears that's her regularly christened name — entered a test at the Metropolitan Opera House recently at which 500 singers tried for next seasons engagements, and she alone was chosen. It was then discovered that the pretty girl with the flowery name had been singing for three years in Broadway caravans.

We seem to be getting something of the fete spirit. Our whole rushing, working, city is blooming out in toy balloons of all the gay colors of the world. Blowing from every coast and from Riverside drive, one sees them, and from automobiles, too; while proud fathers out with the children Sunday afternoon have them tied to waistcoat buttons and saunter happily along with bright bubbles floating above their heads. The rowers on the lake in Central Park tie them to their oars. However disputes may rage as to short or shorter skirts, high necks or low, this is certainly a sweeping season for balloons.

Charles W. McDonough was a perfectly amiable and adjustable husband, he insists. He always tried to accept his wife's point of view so long as he could make his ideas nimble enough to keep pace with hers. But on her eighth change of religion, he gave out. "It was all right for her to change her faith as often as she felt like it," he explained to the judge the other day, when he decided he would have to get a divorce in order to feel settled once more. "But I decided it was too much to demand that I change with her every time. It seemed kind of tough on me, too, when she became a Numerologist. That was her last change. She asked me to pay a woman $100 to teach her the intricacies of it and when she had got her $100 worth of teaching, she said she had learned by means of it that she was married to the wrong man. I ask you, judge, if that wasn't a sad way for me to have lost my $100?" During the ten years recounted in Mr. McDonough's petition, his wife has been a follower of these cults: Economists, Mercurials, Mind Readers, New Scientists, Theosophists, New Thought, Angel Dancers, and Numerologists.

"What sort of books do the blind read most?" a visitor asked the Librarian in that section of the New York Library the other day. She answered him politely, and then turned to me with a sigh. "What kind of books does anyone suppose they like?" she asked, almost petulantly. "I suppose that man was shocked because I told him that 'Hell for Sartain' was the one most taken up by them last month. They like 'thrillers' just as other people do. Love stories and adventures, and those things. People seem to think that because a person is blind, he is concerned only with spiritual values or new thought or something. Sometimes these questioners irritate me." There were 3,000 blind persons in New York at the time of the last census, but this figure was increased, of course by the war. The library tries to keep on hand books enough for all of them—"thrillers," too.

Elenora Rouden, an artist, and Helena Zilinska, linguist, finding business a bit dull in New York, have decided it's a good time to take a few weeks off for a little winking trip. Consequently they have started for San Francisco. "Yes, we're going to walk every step of the way," declared Miss Rouden. "I am going to draw pictures and sell them as we go along, and Miss Zilinska will give lectures in the foreign settlements of cities we pass through." When asked if they had made any special plan about crossing the desert or the mountains which intrude themselves between here and the coast, Miss Rouden hesitated just a minute and then replied: "No, no, but—cheerfully, 'we are going to walk every step, no matter what kind of scenery we are walking over.'"

With the shops showing velvet, fur-trimmed bathing suits, and with 76 women out of every hundred buying long, jade earrings, husbands and fathers are breathing a sigh of thanksgiving that the style in straw hats (for men) has changed but little since last season, and every hat-cleaning place in town is working overtime.

It was natural, perhaps, that the biggest reaction that F. W. Kellogg, business manager of the Los Angeles Express, got from his recent trip to Europe, had to do with the price of newsprint. I was a little disappointed when he made this plain to me when he got back to New York on the Aquitania. I had hoped for some red-hot, inside stuff that the managing editors I serve would be tempted to "kill out" of my column and use on page one, with the brightest head the copy desk could produce. Come to think about it, I guess that Mr. Kellogg after all gave me a good story, when he said that the biggest news he ran into on the other side was that the available supply of newsprint in Norway, Sweden, Finland and Germany is greatly overestimated, and that 80,000 tons represents all of the paper they have for export. "The impression that there was a limitless supply over there is probably due to the fact that at least 19 brokers in America are trying to sell this same 80,000 tons," Mr. Kellogg said.

Brooklyn has welcomed and challenged the croquet champion of Australia. Anyone who is inclined to think the world has moved far too rapidly or that the present generation lives only on, by and for excitement will do well to read and dwell upon these lines. Brooklyn is the American home of croquet, anyway, and has a perfect right to issue its challenge to this Australian girl — yes, it's a girl! — in the name of the whole country. When Newport dropped croquet — years before any of us can remember, my dear — it was Brooklyn which rescued the game from death and has codified it along ever since. Now it is going to vindicate its cure and attention, and let Britain beware!

It looks as though we were at last coming to the underground moving sidewalk as a desperate solution of our traffic problem — which is itself desperate enough to grasp at anything that waves the flag of hope. Engineers of the Transit Commission of the city are devising a plan for the construction of moving platforms beneath the sidewalk on Forty-second street straight across Manhattan from river to river. It is said that these platforms would not only relieve the subway congestion at this crossway but would make possible the removal of the surface cars from Forty-second street and so give automobiles and pedestrians full sway. Maybe eventually we can carry on all our business underground and make a park of the island's surface.

The "malden namers" scored a jubilation victory the other day when Ruth Hink, who is happily married to Heywood Brown, got her name on a real estate deed as Ruth Hink, rather than Mrs. Brown. She and her husband shared a piece of property together but in spite of the mutual agreement of the two to no nomenclature, the other principals in the deal sided at the idea. Finally, with the aid of her lawyers, Ruth Hink convinced them of the legality of it. Miss Hink is president of the Lucy Stone League, an organization of fifty women banded together to assert the inalienable right of a woman to the name she drew from her parents early in life.

LUCY JEANNE PRICE.

AN ORDERLY PROGRAM.

Washington, D. C. — "It was to be expected that President Harding's decision to have this country take an official part in the deliberations of the Supreme Council would be followed by statements of the partisan Democratic press that another Wilson policy had been adopted by the Republican Administration," says the Republican Publicity Association. "But this is by no means the case. It will be recalled that Mr. Wilson, when he was at length convinced that the United States would not accept the league of nations and his program of internationalism, withdrew the unofficial representatives of this Government from the council and severed all connections with it. This was done in a spirit of peevishness and in the belief that the interest of this country might be so jeopardized as to bring pressure to bear on the Senate to swallow the Wilson program whole. The pressure followed, but the Senate wisely withstood it.

"The resumption of unofficial relations with the council imports no obligations other than an earnest desire to be helpful in solving the vast problems with which the allies are confronted. Mr. Harding could have given no better assurance of his unyielding determination to preserve the free action of the United States than by his selection of the man who will 'take part as the representative of the President of the United States in the deliberations of the supreme council,' namely George Harvey, one of the most reputable irreconcilables in opposition to the league of nations. Nor does the selection of Colonel Harvey as the representative of the President bear any analogy to the naming of Colonel House as 'personal representative' of Mr. Wilson during the greater portion of the latter's incumbency, for Harvey's status as Ambassador to Great Britain bears the confirmation of the United States Senate, while House had no authority whatever to speak for the United States.

"The partisan press of the opposition will seek in vain for some inconsistency of attitude on the part of the Administration which it can play up to the glorification of its deposed dictator, and having failed in its quest it will resort to invention. But Harding's words to the Congress in his first address display the program to which he is rigidly adhering and which may well be reiterated:

"The situation is so involved that on peace engagements can not ignore the Old World relationship and the settlements already effected, nor is it desirable to do so in preserving our own rights and contracting our future relationships. The weariness at home and the disappointment of the world have been compensated in the proof that this republic will surrender none of its heritage of nationality, but our rights in international relationships have to be asserted; they require establishment in compact of amity; our part in readjustment and restoration can not be ignored, and must be defined. With the super-governing league definitely rejected and with the world so informed, and with the status of peace proclaimed at home, we may proceed to negotiate the covenanted relationships so essential to the recognition of all the rights everywhere of our own nation and play our full part in joining the peoples of the world in the pursuits of peace once more. We can be helpful because we are moved by no hatreds and harbor no fears. Helpfulness does not mean entanglement, and participation in economic adjustments does not mean sponsorship for treaty commitments which do not concern us, and in which we will have no part."

"The administration is proceeding in orderly fashion and in accordance with American and Republican principles."

Household and France are still paying more than four times the prevailing prices for the necessities of life.

NEGRO WHO GOT LIFE SENTENCE FACES SECOND INDICTMENT.

Madisonville, Ky. — Andrew Hawkins, colored, slayer of Bessie Hays and Bessie Belle Bronaugh, also colored, who was convicted Saturday and given a life sentence for the murder of the Hays woman, enters another trial today on an indictment charging him with the murder of Bronaugh woman. His defense at the former trial was that he, and not the women, was lured to the house in which the double tragedy took place. He says the Hays woman seized his arms while the Bronaugh woman got a pistol from a table. He said he did not remember just what took place except that he obtained the pistol and that both women were killed.

Splendid progress is being made on the Children's Day program to be given by the Junior Department of the Third Street M. E. Sunday school on Sunday evening, June 5th. "Life's Summertime" by Fred R. Revival services will begin at Stewart's Chapel M. E. church Monday evening with Rev. N. G. Griswold of Tollesboro as the evangelist. Rev. WIDOW SLAYS AN INSISTENT SUITOR DURING QUARREL

Franklin, Ohio, Woman Shoots and Kills Teamster Whose Attention She Had Spurned Many Times.

Franklin, Ohio, May 23. — A dingy hall room over a livery stable, the home of a widow, was the scene of a desperate struggle, culminating in the fatal shooting of a teamster here Sunday night.

Longers in the vicinity of Meek's livery stable, on the outskirts of this village, were startled from their Sunday afternoon siestas when a single shot split the Sabbath calm. They ran to the livery stable in an effort to trace the shot.

A whiff of smoke curling from a second story window attracted them. They climbed the stairs and pushed open the rickety door to the one-room home of Mrs. Ella Durr, 42 years old, a widow.

A woman, with disheveled hair pillowed on her shoulders, clothing torn to shreds and eyes fixed on a corner of the room, greeted the searchers. In her right hand she clutched a smoking revolver.

The searchers followed her glance to the corner of the room. They saw the crumpled form of Charles Burrows, 45 years old, teamster. A hole in his head showed that the single shot had found its mark.

Without a word the woman, glancing up at the score or more of men who faced her, calmly surrendered the revolver.

In half-choked sobs, through the bars of her cell, Mrs. Durr told her story to county officials.

"I shot in self-defense," she said. "Burrows, several times before, has asked me to go to the theater with him. I didn't like him and I refused. The last time he asked me was one night last week. I told him that I wouldn't go out with him if he was the only man in the world."

"He told me that the next time I refused he was going to kill me."

Her eyes widened in horror as she told the officials of the fatal shooting.

"He came into the room, pushing through the door while I had my back turned. He sprang at me. I fought him off just as long as my strength held out and tried to call for help, but he held his hand over my mouth."

"I finally got my hand round to a drawer in the table and slipped out my revolver. When he released my hand to hit me, I raised the gun and pulled the trigger. I don't remember anything after that."

County authorities placed a charge of murder against Mrs. Durr. She received a preliminary hearing before the Coroner's jury this morning at Lebanon.

Chicago has more telephones than the whole of France.

UPRISING IN EGYPT.
